7. We cannot accept responsibility for any losses resulting from errors or omissions on your advertisement or any part of the Holiday France Direct website.
8. We reserve the right to refuse advertisements without explanation and have no liability for any expense in doing so.
9. If you wish to advertise a different property at any time, you must submit this as a new advertisement.
10. We make every endeavour to ensure that our suppliers deliver a reliable on-line service and that internet down-time, for whatever reason, is kept to a minimum. In the unlikely event of down-time, we are unable to provide compensation.
11. We reserve all rights in respect of the text and images on your advertisement page and we specifically reserve the right to use material contained therein for publicity and promotional purposes.
12. In all cases, the property booking contract is between you, the advertiser, and your guest. Holiday France Direct has no liability in this respect.
13. Holiday France Direct is not a letting agency and has no responsibility or liability for the level of enquiries and bookings you receive from your property advertisement page.

14. Additional services such as prime positioning on the Holiday France Direct website can be purchased but will not be effected until full payment has been received from you.
15. Reviews about your advertised property must always be from genuine guests who have stayed there.

You and Your Visitors

27. The guidelines below regarding your responsibilities to your guests and to the law (You, Your Visitors and the Law) are an integral part of these terms and conditions.
28. We aim to provide a first-class service to the consumer. You are expected to co-operate with this aim right from the first enquiry via Holiday France Direct through to the handling of complaints or emergencies.
It is essential that advertised properties are maintained to a high standard, and that arrangements are in place for cleaning between lets.
29. Holiday France Direct must be able to inspect any property advertised. In the event that after investigation we find a property is not up to standard or that an advertiser is not acting fairly or meeting local/national legislation, we reserve the right to remove the property advertisement from www.holidayfrancedirect.co.uk without notice and to refuse further advertising from the advertiser.

You, Your Visitors and the Law

Your property must be fully covered by insurance, comply with all safety legislation and be safe for guests to stay in.

By advertising with Holiday France Direct, you become subject to the Trade Descriptions Act, so please ensure that your advertisement does not mislead. If something changes between placing the advertisement and receiving an enquiry, you are obliged to tell the potential visitor, or you could be in breach of the law.

Our many years of experience tell us that complaints are minimal if accommodation is clean, appliances work and everything matches the description on your property advertisement page.

Keeping everything up to standard is essential, so frequent checks are essential.

We recommend you advise your guests what they should do if anything does go wrong, and state clearly that this must be done the moment the problem occurs. If your guest tells you or your local representative straightaway, then you have the opportunity and responsibility to put things right and to assess at the time any level of rent rebate or other compensation that might be required.

Maintaining a visitor's book or file of letters from satisfied holidaymakers is a useful safeguard against unjustified claims.

If you do receive a complaint from a guest, it is in everybody's interest to ensure the problem is resolved quickly. In the event of dispute, you have responsibility for reaching agreement with your guest. We are not party to the booking contract and therefore cannot participate in complaint resolution.

In the event that after investigation we find a property is not up to standard or that an advertiser is not acting fairly or meeting local/national legislation, we reserve the right to remove the property advertisement from www.holidayfrancedirect.co.uk without notice and to refuse further advertising from the advertiser.
